THE BLUFFS UNION DEPOT.

Council Makes Concessions Which Will Secure Its Erection.

PROPERTY OWNERS JUBILANT

A Seduction Case Settled by Mar ringe-A New Theory in the Spears Case-The Real Estate Exchange.

The Union Depot Is Assured.

A meeting in which there was probably as much interest as any ever held in the Biuffs was that held by the city council last ovening, and that it was fraught with matters of the others importance to the city was manifest by the presence of scores of the heaviest property owners and most entering held to determine whether or not the city would necede to the demands of the Union Pacific Rallway company, which, in brief, were that they should be allowed to withdraw their half hourly suburban train service required by the definition of the Union Pacific Rallway company, which, in brief, were that they should be allowed to withdraw their half hourly suburban train service required by the definition of the Union Pacific Rallway company, which is effect, prepared by the definition of the second roading. Amotion to use it to its third visuality, was presented and passed to its ascend roading. Amotion to uses it to its third roading, was lost, Alderman Waternan vong to. That the spectators were disapproval. When matters had quieted down somewhat, Hon, George F, Wright took the floor and made a very clear explanation of the situation, showing how the company regarded the matter, and why it was the they domanded the concession provided by the ordinance. regarded the matter, and why it that they demanded the consions provided by the ordina He was followed by Colenet W. F. Sapp A. Caspar, A. C. Graham, Alsor. Weaver, Knepher, Lacy, Everett and Waman. They urged the passage of the anance, as it was necessary in order to see the new deept, and the amount asked we be far more than overbalanced by the trom the new decont company. Many of nance, as it was necessary in order to secure the new depot, and the amount asked would be far more than overbalanced by the taxes from the new depot company. Many of the remarks were directed point blank at Alderman Waterman, and ne soon realized that he was not in the winning or ever popular boat. If ever any one wanted assistance, he did, and everybody know it. He had stated that Mr. Casaur was opposed to the move, but that gentleman soon cleared his skirts by saying that he had not understood the situation, and was not heartly in favor of giving what was asked. Waterman insisted that the Union Pacific had never follified their promises, and that he was opposed to giving up Union arcune, even if the taxes were remitted. He stated that Alderman Lacy was in favor of remitting the taxes of the reliroad company, but would not vote to remit the taxes of indigent windows, etc., etc. Lacy denied it, and stated that not only had he voted to remit taxes in such cases, but had on numerous occasions paid the taxes for poor widows out of his low pocket.

Waterman said the records wouldn't show it, and clung tensously to his poor widow argument until Lacy biuffed him to name an instance where he had refused to assist in worthy cases. Lacy insuited that Waterman did not know of a case in his own wary, in fact he did not know anything about what was going on in his ward, as he had not been around through it until the last few weeks, for nearly tiwe years, and was now electioners. He had refused to assist in worthy cases. Lacy insuited that the did not being the company's assessment was a bit too believe the company's assessment was a bit tool in the did not believe the company's assessment was a bit tool.

Alderman Everett stated that he did not believe the company's assessment was a bit too high, attoogs it had declared it exercitant. He was not willie to allow it said that the council had unjustly assessed them, but if the remission of $12,120 in taxes would secure the union depot he was willing to vote the time of the council to the council of the council to the council of $12,120 in taxes would secure the union depot he was willing to vote the time of the council o for it.

Alderman Knepher thought likewise, and a motion to again take up the ordinance carried. It was passed to its third reading and then passed, and the this agreed to as read. It was greeted with a hurrah, and everybody was immensely tickled. But for the objections of the alderman from the First ward it would have gone through in the first instance, but as it finally carried no one begrudged the time.

The ordinance provides that the concessions asked by the company small be granted provided that the company orders into the union depot acheme, accepts the proposition within ten days and begins work inside of forty days. The commany signed an agreement to the offect that they would promptly pay their taxes on an assessment of $155,000, and would hold the city free from any annoyance from soil or costs in the event of a legal controversy over paying the state tax on the full assessment of $805,000. It is stated that the last stumbling block is now removed, and work on the new atmuture will begin very shortly.

strangers entered the place and naked permission to eat their dinner there. The request was granted and they fell to on a piece of bottom which one of them extracted from his pocket. Just as they finished Blank looked around and found the gun under his nose and heard the invitation to "shell out." A little girl who was in the gan under his nose and heard the invitation to "shoil out." A little grit who was in the shop ran out and acreamed for help and the gan was pocketed and the two strangers departed, going up Broadway. At the corner of Pearl and Broadway they were arrested by Deputy Marsinal Sarhyte, who took a revolveg from one and a alungshot from the other. They gave the mames of Jacob O'Man and James Russell. Blank thinks they had a hand in the robbery of his place. I few days ago, as he fancied that he identified the clothes worn by Russell. The pair will have a hearing today.

is a question that occurred to a great many yesterday, when they read in the morning papers that Brown had been declared not guilty of the crime by the jury which tried papers that Brown had been declared not guilty of the crime by the jury which tried the case. There are many who firmly believe that Brown is guilty of the murder, and it is even alleged that every member of the jury thought so, but was unwilling to ton-vict on circumstantial evidence, especially as one very important link in the chain was lacking. Brown was not traced closer than six blocks away from where the murder was committed, and uside from this a motive sufficient to induce the commission of so beinous a crime seemed wanting. It could not be robbery, and there was nothing to show what it was, if anything.

It is not urged is any that there is anything to argue in favor of the defendant personally. His past record, including a term in the penitentiary for highway robbery, his conduct during the past sommer, when he figured frequently as an obstroperous member of the chain gang, and even his sippearance in the court room during the trial, were each and all calmitand to suppress any feeling of symputhy that might otherwise have been manifested. It is not believed that he is at all too good to do the work with which he was charged, and it is not contended that a limitity term in the penitentiary would do him a bit of harm, but the feeling seems to be general that the vendict was a just one, and that firewen is not be more of William and the general and the question arises. reached home. He mysteriously disappeared, and not the slightest cine could be found as to his whereabouts until his partially decomposed body was washed up by the waters of the mudy Missouri on a bar near Plattsmouth.

That he was murdered here and the body thrown in the river there was not the slightest doubt, and although it was histed that the deceased had known to much for the good of certain parties the cine was not followed up, and the causes that led to Hinkle's death are as much a mystery to the general public today as they were mentis ago when the murder was first committed.

The theory on which work will hereafter be conducted is that Hinkle, who went home every morning at 3 o'clock, unfortunately for himself saw something that brought to his knowledge certain facts in connection with the commission of a crime, and that because he knew of these matters, and for fear that he would use his knowledge to bring the guilty parties to justice, he was put out of the way.

It is believed that Spears likewise obtained similar knowledge. He frequently played for dances in that part of the city, and returned home about 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning.

It will be remembered that last spring a for dances in that part of the city, and returned home about 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning.

It will be remembered that last spring a systematic robbery of freight cars in the Northwestern yards was uncartical, and the guilty parties arrested. Several of the parties have been tried, some being convicted, others acquitted, and some pleading guilty. The last of the cases will be tried this terms. Now it is known that the two unfortunate my series are supported by the series of the cases will be tried this terms. Now it is known that the two unfortunated my sterious neaths had knowledge of what was going on, and it is believed that this is what led to their being put out of the way, for the reason that "dead men tell no tales." A detective is working on the case and will sift the matter to the bottom. The motive is furnished, and several circumstances corroborating the theory have been found. It is firmly believed that even if it should develop that the instigators and abottors of both crimes will be found to be members of the gang of freight car robbers which operated so extensively and so boldly in the Northwestorn yards a few months age.
